How to edit images in Photoshop Elements Let's see how to edit images in Photoshop Elements. We will discuss: Step 1: Open an image Step 2: Import another image to edit Step 3: Activate the tool panel Step 4: Edit the content Step 5: Edit images Step 6: Export the image Step 1: Open an image Open an image in Photoshop Elements In the recent versions of Photoshop Elements, the software has a new "Advanced" button. Click on the Advanced button, and you will get access to the picture you open. But you can also open an image by clicking the "Import" button and then selecting an image. You can select a specific image from your hard drive (Images), your camera (Images) or the Photo Library (Images). It is automatically added to the project. Step 2: Import another image to edit You can open an image and make many changes. But if you want to alter only a part of the image, you have to select it and do this selection one by one. So, you can open a part of the image and make the necessary changes. But how can you do this? You can't create a selection directly from the process of opening the image because the image is still in the Photoshop Elements screen. Let's see how to solve this problem. There are three methods: Method 1: Select a content to open a part of the image Select a content to open a part of the image You can open a part of the image by selecting a content. There are several ways to select the content of the image. You can find the content in the Layers of the project (Image) or the Image Editor (Content). You can select a content in the content panel. You can search for a specific color in the image using the color tool (Color Picker) or the color picker (Color Finder). You can use the selection from the previous image (duplicate). Tip: You can always use the command "Ctrl+Drag" to select an image. Step 3: Activate the tool panel Activate the tool panel You can also activate the tool panel. To do this, click on the rectangular icon in the a681f4349e

Q: Is it possible to code the css variables inline? I am new to CSS and trying to figure out if it's possible to do something like this: Write a style for one class as follows: @keyframes foo { from { height: 0; } to { height: 100%; } } @keyframes bar { from { width: 0; } to { width: 100%; } } css: .bar { animation: bar; } .foo { animation: foo; } I hope that this is possible or maybe there is another way to do this? Thanks. A: No, this is not possible. CSS variables allow you to define a constant value which might be replaced later in the code. Here's how it works. The syntax of the @keyframes rule is : @keyframes { from { } to { } } source: Essentially, you can supply the property and the value, but not the values for individual properties. Your example is not valid because you're not using the keyframes at all. Amid reports that the FBI has reopened the investigation of Hillary Clinton's private server to look into whether the e-mail system's failure aided her handling of classified information, a senior FBI official told NBC News this is part of the bureau's standard procedure after a close election. "It has very little to do with the election and everything to do with the investigation — to bring all the information in," the official said, declining to be identified by name. FBI agents have been looking at the Clinton e-mail server not to make a political case, but because of "titanium circles," the official said, meaning how sensitive the information was. A former senior State Department official said the FBI will not be focused on the content of the e-mails or the people that were using the server. U.S. intelligence officials repeatedly have said that the e-mails were not classified at the time

Q: Is there a way to change the application icon while running? I know how to change the icon, using this, when the application is launched: System.Drawing.Icon.FromHandle(new System.Drawing.IconInfo.FromFile(Application.ExecutablePath)).Icon = "Icon1.ico"; After some time it will change to the Icon which I want. But I would like to set the icon while the application is running. How can I do it? This might be the duplicate of this question. UPDATE The correct code to set the icon dynamically is this: Windows.ApplicationModel.Package.Current.Resources.MergedDictionaries.Add("myRes", myAppx); Application.Current.Resources.MergedDictionaries.Add("myRes", myAppx); Application.Current.Resources["myRes"] = new BitmapImage(new Uri("MyIcon.ico", UriKind.Relative)); The Uri("MyIcon.ico", UriKind.Relative) is the location of the icon, but when it runs it doesn't find it. Maybe I'm doing something wrong? UPDATE 2 In my case the icon was located in the "images" folder of my project. Therefore I called the location the same as the project's location. A: You can change the icon of the application when it is actually running by setting the icon of the Application.Resources.MergedDictionaries collection. What this does is this: Application.Resources.MergedDictionaries is a property that always contains a list of dictionaries. Each dictionary has a name, and can contain string, resource or class type items. For each string, it will create a ResourceDictionary, and put the string into it. For each resource, it will create an instance of a ResourceDictionary for each.xaml file in the assembly. For each class, it will create an instance of the class and set the class's Icon property. To change the icon of an application while it is running, you can set the icon using the above method. The path to the icon can be just the name of the icon, or you can use relative paths. For example, you can either use: public const string IconPath = @"Content\MyIcon.ico"; Or, if you
