Every day, your computer is vulnerable to bad guys. Far more internet users die from viruses, identity theft, and online scams than from shark attacks. With popular services like Facebook and Gmail being hacked and millions of people using counterfeit credit cards, businesses are taking precaution against identity theft. They're signing up for internet safety classes, updating antivirus software, and blocking users who had been compromised before. But even with so much effort it's tough to stop every break-in. So for those who love computers, the good guys' problems have never been so tough -- or so tempting. (© Copyright 2008 - 2009 CBS Broadcasting Inc. All Rights Reserved. The CBS... Capture the internet data in real time. No more missing data! USES: Monitor the incoming/outgoing connections and see what's going on. Remember the type of internet traffic, such as: - HTTP - FTP - Remote Desktop - Data Port - etc... Monitor your Network Rating: March 26, 2014 modemgph At present, software is available that allows you to monitor Internet traffic. Some of these programs allow you to set their own preferences. They can monitor both incoming and outgoing Internet data or traffic. So, for example, you could monitor Internet traffic from your home computer, a device attached to your computer, or your portable device. You can choose the medium in which to monitor Internet traffic - email, web browsing, internet radio, chat programs, etc. Some of the programs enable you to select the Internet address ranges that you want to monitor. In general, these software products allow you to monitor Internet data and traffic. This permits you to determine the type of Internet data and traffic that you are receiving and the destination of your Internet data and traffic. With a program such as this, you can monitor what is going on with your Internet service and you can select what programs you want to monitor. You can set the programs that you want to monitor in your Internet service provider's graphical user interface (GUI). You can set the program to monitor incoming Internet data only, outgoing Internet data only, incoming Internet data and outgoing Internet data, Internet radio only, Internet radio and Internet traffic or Internet traffic only. The programs can receive your Internet traffic in both forms - as a file or in the form of a dialog. You can receive and monitor Internet traffic that uses the Internet Protocol (IP) version 4 or the Internet Protocol (IP) version 6. Most of these software products allow you to receive Internet traffic in the form of a file and you can store it on your hard drive. The programs can monitor the Internet traffic in the same way that a Web server does - that is, you can define the range of Internet addresses to monitor. If you are working with a dial-up connection (a connection via a modem), it is usually not possible to monitor Internet traffic. Some of the programs offer this feature. The reason for this limitation is that, when working with a dial-up connection, the program cannot see all of the data that is being
