This invention relates to a magneto-optical recording medium, and more particularly to a magneto-optical recording medium, which is well suited for a magnetic field modulation type magnetic head. Recently, optical recording media such as optical disks have received much attention. The magnetic recording media, in which information can be rewritable in a non-contact manner, have rapidly been improved in recording density, in particular. On the other hand, in order to realize an optical disk having a high recording density, recording and reproducing should be performed with a light beam smaller than the spot diameter of a magnetic head. It is well-known that, in the case where a light spot of a smaller diameter is used, a change in the light reflectance due to a change in the magnetization caused by the light becomes larger. Thus, there are problems such that, for example, recorded information can easily be erased. To avoid the above problems, a super resolution magneto-optical recording medium has been proposed, which comprises a magneto-optical recording layer and an intermediate layer provided between the magneto-optical recording layer and a substrate, the thickness of the intermediate layer being made smaller than the spot diameter of a light beam in reproducing, thereby obtaining a larger change in the light reflect
