1. Adobe Photoshop is an expensive program Like a lot of computer programs, Photoshop can be quite pricey. A single license for a single user can cost a lot. So, you need to budget for the programs you're going to use, both in terms of money and time. However, if you have a need, you can get your hands on a Photoshop 'lite' license for a much more affordable price of around $350, sometimes less. 2. This is an advanced photo-editing program Photoshop is complex and you'll need to use it with a lot of patience and understanding of how to manipulate raster images (a very different way of manipulating images from traditional vector-based programs)

3. Photoshop is a very versatile tool Photoshop offers advanced functionality, the ability to use multiple layers and so many more features than most people can use.

However, the downside is that Photoshop is very complex, and you will need to learn the program to use it most effectively. The program has a number of tutorials available online if you get stuck, but for the more advanced users, especially professional ones, Photoshop is a multi-talented program that offers far more than just basic image editing.

This photo editing program is part of the Adobe Creative Suite, which is more than just Photoshop. Photoshop is just one of its programs, and in fact, there are many other programs that fall under the Creative Suite banner.

Adobe Creative Suite is a lot more than Photoshop and features include: Adobe Photoshop Adobe Lightroom Adobe Acrobat Adobe InDesign
4. Photoshop is a lot to learn Photoshop is a complex piece of software. It takes a lot of practice to master this program and to be able to use Photoshop effectively. So, if you're not adept with image editing software (and who is these days?), it's often not worth the time to learn and master Photoshop. Some programs are specifically designed to let you edit images and remove the photos that you would like to change; these programs are usually vector-based software, which are far simpler to use than raster-based programs like Photoshop. While many people enjoy the challenge of learning a complicated program like Photoshop, it takes a lot of work and time before you really can master it. Even after mastering

1. Field of the Invention

The present invention relates to a compound semiconductor structure and a method of manufacturing the same. More particularly, the present invention relates to a compound semiconductor structure including a top layer of a group IV-V semiconductor compound layer including zinc (Zn) to which oxygen is added as an impurity, and a method of manufacturing the same.

2. Description of the Related Art The semiconductor chip structure mounted on a lead frame is normally placed in a metal mold apparatus and then a heat treatment for activation of the semiconductor chip (e.g., high temperature annealing) is performed.

Moreover, in a process of mounting the semiconductor chip on a substrate, a heat treatment at a high temperature is performed. In the case where the top layer of the semiconductor structure is made from a single crystal of a group IV-V semiconductor compound, it is difficult to perform the heat treatment. Therefore, the semiconductor chip is often formed into a multi-layered structure, i.e., a compound semiconductor structure in which the top layer is made of a group IV-V semiconductor compound. In the group IV-V compound semiconductor, zinc (Zn) is added to the compound semiconductor to form the compound semiconductor material. Zinc has a strong affinity for oxygen and is capable of easily incorporating oxygen in the zinc-added compound semiconductor. The thus-formed oxygen-added zinc-added compound semiconductor is most commonly used as a material of the top layer of the semiconductor structure. The above-described oxygen-added zinc-added compound semiconductor includes oxygen in the crystal structure. Therefore, when the compound semiconductor is activated by the high temperature annealing, the oxygen in the crystal structure is liberated and oxygen is released into the air. Moreover, in the process of mounting the semiconductor chip on the substrate, a heat treatment is performed at a high temperature in some cases. In such a case, the oxygen remaining in the top layer is liberated as hydrogen and diffused into the substrate, thereby deteriorating the substrate. Furthermore, if the hydrogen diffuses in the substrate, the junctions are damaged, thereby deteriorating the electrical performance of the semiconductor chip. In order to prevent the above-described problems, one method is proposed in which a diffusion barrier layer is formed on the surface of the substrate. The diffusion barrier layer is formed by injecting fluorine into the inside of the substrate to thereby consume the oxygen
