Developer :Andrew Linklater Andrew Linklater (born 20 January 1971) is a former Australian rules footballer who played for the Essendon Football Club in the Australian Football League (AFL). Linklater was taken with the second pick in the 1989 VFL Draft from Calder Cannons. He played at fullback for Essendon between 1991 and 1995 and was recruited by Richmond with the 24th overall pick in the 1996 AFL Draft. Linklater would play only one game for Richmond, in 1997, and then spent five seasons with Collingwood. Linklater spent the 2000 and 2001 seasons at Richmond but then joined St Kilda in 2002 where he played six seasons. In 2008, he rejoined Richmond but retired at the end of the 2009 AFL season. Goodies USA is testing a robotic carrot harvester that could keep produce shelves stocked with those little treat-sized carrots by the end of the year. The car-based machine picks up carrots at the front of a moving vehicle, then places them in bags for people to grab on their way into the supermarket. Goodies USA has put the technology in development for about two years and plans to sell it to other companies. So far, it has raised $3 million in funding. The company said it plans to roll out a prototype vehicle to test in California in the summer. "When we drive through someone's parking spot, they don't even have to move their car," said CEO Jim Muirhead. "It's really a straight-forward take-away experience. It makes vegetables accessible." Goodies said its technology solves two problems at once. It also can drop off carrots into an overhead bin that holds two bags, one for the buyer and one for the retailer. "A shopper can easily select a bag of carrots, pick up her bag, and go

What's new:

The 1st Lieutenant Christopher 'Shaa' Collings is an acting RIC officer and noted maritime historian and archaeologist and is ready to cut it from the top again, with a book that's set to take the maritime world by storm. What makes his book so unique is not only the sheer level of detail, but his extraordinary sailing experience of 15 years, which has led him down the various bays, rivers, estuaries and harbours of South East Asia, highlighting many of the laid back, yet memorable bits of history in the area. As a result, it's apt to say he is a man with the global history figured in his blood. During his research, we had the pleasure of speaking to the captain about his new project, and how the notion grew into a book and the concept of a new mariner's map of the region. On our time travelling around the various highlights of his trip around Southeast Asia, he told us about a variety of intriguing ports in the region — from Malaysia's illustrious history on a superyacht and relics of a 1942 slaver incident involving the Dutch and the locals, to Laos, where the decline of Communism has brought with it the return of a thriving business at the local market. So, what was it like working with our shipping archive? The captain took us to a windy and expansive station in Australia, and offered his insights into the safety and navigation procedure onboard our yachts. On his own ships, he said use was made of the TP-50 hull and navigation system, which has saved countless lives. Needless to say, the captain's not trying to pressure the sellers of the product himself, as he knows his history lays with The Ship Bible rather than its manufacturers. "I just use what's available," Collings explained to us. "The Royal Navy always like to use instruments that have been used all over the world. They are always looking for an easy way to get equipment to people on board wherever they are, and that's basically my job, being on those boats." AARENEWSPACE: What could be said about the 14-week journey? SHAA COLLINGS: It was absolutely wonderful; it was really the best part of my life. It was almost like going to live in the South Seas. It was a great time to be doing it, so

System Requirements:

Windows 7, 8, and 10 Mac OS X 10.9 SteamOS (free) and the latest Lutris-1.2.7-stable release Setup: The 2nd level of experience (called the "Adventure mode") requires you to create a save file of your own. Otherwise, the game auto-generates one for you and you can load the save game to access it later (which is a bit of a time sink, but I highly recommend it). The 3rd level of experience (
