What's new:

! Buy a bottle of wine. Drink it. After you drink the wine, maybe put the rest of the bottle in the fridge. Check the fridge the next day to see if you feel like having wine. If so, open the fridge and take your wine and then drink it. I only have one bottle in the fridge, I drank it one night, and it still had some alcohol in it from the day it was open in the fridge. There are a lot of open bottles in the fridge, and when you plan to have wine, you can decide. For me, if I plan on having wine, but don't know how long it will take to open, I keep the bottle in the fridge, and when it's time, I open it. How long does it take to open? Well, it depends. The first wine I got for Christmas, it was a white wine. Well, the white wine looked good when I first put it in the fridge. Then, the next day, it was gone. I had opened the wine. When it comes to opening white wines, you need a 1 year old bottle for a white wine. If a 1-year-old white wine seems like over-the-top, and I should get a 3-year-old white wine, then you need a 3-year-old bottle for white wine. So, when I drank my bottles of wine, there might be one that I opened last night, and a few opened ones that I drank today. See what I mean? So... I actually drank two wines last night. The first one was the 2005 Varuhine, which I drank, and then I drank the 2004 Kestrel Estate red wine. But, I'm going to open the bottle for this one... but, first I should tell you about this wine. I have a 2001 Etruscan gold from Craven Arms, and I was happy with that 2001 Etruscan gold. But, a couple of days ago, I bought this bottle... This wine, I had not had the chance to drink it, and here is what I think about this 2001 Bordeaux, from California. Alice has brought me a number of great wines that she got me for Christmas, and this wine was one of them... So, I picked this wine up off the shelf,
