undefined value attribute What would be the easiest way to set the default value for an input that can be potentially undefined or null? I could test it with a custom data attribute and/or a default value, but I am still curious about the right way to do this. A: Not exactly sure how you wish to react if the value is not provided, but here is a way to get it done (in JS): let input_val = "default val"; document.querySelector('input[value=undefined]').value = input_val;

===== The traditional textbook on community pharmacy practice describes medication therapy management (MTM) as follows; "MTM is a structured, patient centered, systematic process designed to promote optimum medication therapy outcomes through the provision of clinical services by the pharmacist and includes patient education, medication therapy problems and adverse drug reactions (ADRs)." \[[@B1]\]. MTM began out as a scientific discipline in the early 1980's with the belief that medications had adverse effects and they should be monitored. The National Institutes of Health created a federal agency to monitor and improve the quality and safety of the health care system called the National Quality Strategy, National Quality Advisory Council, and National Quality Review Board. \[[@B2]\] This agency determined that no health care organization should be

Who doesn't love pizza? The owner said she was with her mother and three kids when the van caught on fire. They were dropped off in front of the pizza place, and they called 911 about 15 minutes later. She told NY1 that she saw the fire building up in the van. "When she called me, she said, 'Oh my God, we have a van on fire,'" she said. "I'm like, 'Ma, I'm on
