Townsend: Thank you for your contribution to our re-election campaign. As a fellow Floridian, I greatly appreciate your support. I need your continued help in the weeks to come. As you know, the final weeks of a campaign can be a frenetic time, but I am confident that I will be re-elected by an extremely large margin. Once I am reelected, I will work to restore a more balanced tax system, open the state's doors to jobs and energy development, and make education accessible to every Floridian. Please pass this e-mail on to your family, friends and neighbors. Together, we can work to pass these commonsense reforms, open the state's doors to new jobs, and provide every student in Florida a good education. Sincerely, Charlie Crist Governor cc: Subject: Re: Because of you, we will win. To: Did you guys get his mailer? I'm having trouble with the Pierce Forrester thing (mailer) and liked this one better. A: Well, the file is compressed with LZMA, but the LZMA documentation says that LZMA supports uncompressed files as well. However, in practice they are actually treated like compressed/compressed with an LZMA chunk as a separate header. I suspect your file is in fact uncompressed. You can test this by downloading the file on a different machine with a software decompressor, such as 7-zip. If you decompress the file and open it with a hex editor, you should see something like: 00 00 00 3C 55 00 00 00 00 00 00 38 55 00 00 00 00 00 43 55 00 00 00 00 00... 00 00 00... 00 00 00 42 55 00 00 00 00 00 3C 55 00 00 Note that the 00-00 pattern at the beginning and end of every block is just a marker, the actual header is inside. So there should be a header (00 00 00 3C 55 00 00) which is followed by a body which contains the actual data (00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00), and then there is another header (00 00 00 38 55 00 00) which is followed by the same body (repeating the same pattern...), etc. Let's consider the last two headers. The first one ends in C55 00 00, which is 0xCB 0x55 0x00 which is just 0x00 0xCB 0x55. So we have something like 0xCB 0x55 0x00 0x00 0xCB 0x55. Now we are going to see how LZMA encoding works. LZMA encodes the compressed file with the LZMA encoder, and then it dumps the encoded bytes to a temporary file. From the LZMA specification: The LZMA encoder never changes the file pointer or updates the dictionary. The dictionary is just read and pointed to at the beginning of compressed files. That means that the temporary file is always going to have the same first few bytes. We can see this when we unpack it with 7-zip. So the 0x00 0xCB 0x55 0x00 0x00 0xCB 0x55 header will always appear at the same offset as the first line you quoted in the question. So now you just need to find out how to get the header. You can do this in two
