Welcome to Mars. In 2050 the funding for space exploration ran out. Out of ideas, NASA postponed its manned Mars mission for 30 years. Meanwhile, the Martian atmosphere started to thicken, the volcanoes stabilized, and the weather cooled. The green plains turned into dry and dusty deserts, and the water in the rivers turned into glacial ice. The ancient canals connecting the volcanoes finally froze, and the poles started to take over in the late 21st century. In 2020, NASA blew up its Mars mission, sealing an atmosphere into the planet and abandoned it for good. While everything went into reverse, the first unofficial expedition set up shop on Mars. Earth and Mars switched place, and you're the first human on Mars. The game is completely free of microtransactions. You can interact with other players on our website and social networks, and join our private forums. As you guessed, Kill the Bad Guy is an arcade game with a puzzling twist. The goal is to kill that weird bastard who throws pebbles at you. This is where the game gets interesting. Most puzzle games have a trail of clues to follow to understand how to get around a "bad guy." In Kill the Bad Guy, you need to kill the bad guy by throwing rocks into some holes in the ground. How do you do that? You get a rock and throw it at the bad guy. If it hits him, he dies, and the pitiful pebbles fall into the "holes" in the ground. You get points by throwing pebbles at the hole and your level goes up accordingly. If the pebble hits him at an odd angle, he'll act like a regular person and run away from it. But you can slowly approach him and hit him while he runs, which raises his level. You can get up to 150 points per level. You need to get 150 points before you get the bonus level and it is not easy to get the 150 points. In the bonus level, the holes are of different sizes and you need to line them up with the pebbles. The game is not over until the last level. Gameplay "Kill The Bad Guy" Graphics: As you can see, the graphics are decent. All the graphics are nice and are done well. The character is ugly and he is ugly as hell, but the effects are what make the game. The gameplay is really fun and I found the game to be incredibly challenging. The controls are simple. Gameplay "Kill The Bad Guy" Sound: In the game, the music is fun and plays nice with the gameplay. It's not so loud that it gets annoying, and it's not so quiet that you can't hear the bad guy throwing pebbles at you. The sound effects of the rocks as they hit the holes and the bad guy's reactions when you hit him are nice. The voice acting is annoying as hell. Who the fuck talks like that? It's not like it's the best voice acting in the world, but it's so fucking bad that I am amazed that it is the case. The voice acting is so bad that the game really sucks if you do not have a set of good headphones. Game "Kill The Bad Guy" Replay Value: There is a rewind feature if you mess up. You can hit the rewind button anytime during gameplay, but if you

A small, but strong, humanoid race. The Scrfs are neutral-ground biomechanical alliances of the Terran galaxy. Mostly humanoid, though they come in a plethora of different designs and sizes. Humanoids made in factories to order. The Scrfs refuse to fight amongst themselves. Instead, they choose to live in peace with the seven other species of the Galaxy; working for the betterment of the Galaxy and their own species. For the most part they are a peaceful race but are prone to cracking under stress and violent mental abuse. A small race based on their union with the Scrfs. Little more than a collection of youths of the seven races who are trained to fight and complete missions. They are few in number and stand out a mile in any battlefield. Known for swift reaction and ruthless brutality. In the Starlord universe, the humans are by far the most widely traveled. All the other races have their own colonies throughout the Galaxy. Humans, however, are the most populated and are known to venture into new star systems. Human beings have existed for eons. They are strong and powerful, but not indestructible. They have an average life span of the human race and can live for over 100 years. The humans are one of the most numerous species on Earth today and are the most, if not only species, capable of interstellar travel. The human species is all-inclusive and has the most gender diversity. Due to the space they have, humans can alter their physiology to have the capabilities of an alien species. They are the species in which scientific knowledge is the highest in regard to mutable human evolution. Some of the many human-derived species include: --- Humans have inter-stellar travel: Humans have the ability to travel from place to place in a matter of seconds. This has allowed them to expand to other stars and planets through space travel. --- Humans have humanoid strength: Humans, like other humanoid species, have the ability to achieve superhuman strength when required. --- Humans have an expansive knowledge: Humans have an extensive knowledge of many sciences that are applicable and not limited to Earth. However, they are considered by many to be one of the most scientifically advanced. --- Humans have near immortal capacities: Humans have the ability to extend their lives, essentially, indefinitely. --- Humans have the capability to be mentally ill: Humans have the ability to develop severe psychological disorders, most commonly known as mental illness.
