can some one help plz Thanks A: Because you are sending a String value to the function, not the full function name. So, you need to use something like below :

private static void SyncServer() { await Task.Delay(2000); // a wait of 2 sec. // The Invoke works in the UI thread, so it doesn't wait for the call to return. DeviceManager.Invoke((Action)(() => { PhoneStateManager.RequestStatusMessage(new StringBuilder(DeviceNetworkType), "Normal Network Status"); PhoneStateManager.RequestStatusMessage(new StringBuilder(DeviceState), "Normal Phone State"); })); // Wait for the result to show on the UI. await Task.Delay(2000); } If you need to use await Task.Delay(2000), you could use async/await for better readability. If you need the Run after the call to return, you could use Async and await for better readability and better performance. Also, in the above example, you should use Invoke to avoid (potential) dead locks as mentioned here. So, in order for you to "call" the above method in the callback asynchronously, you can use await/async: async void CallBack() { await MyMethod(); } async void caller() { //Call Back await callerCallback(); //Other Code } Don't use sync blocks. Don't use sync statements to start of with. Don't use sync statements to end of with. public async Task MyMethod() { // Do stuffs here // If you don't start the task with the 'await' statment, // you will be killed by GC because the function is returning // before it is completely done. await Task.Delay(2000); }

Hickman testified Tuesday that a baby's skull was crushed so badly "it looked like it had been crushed in a coffee grinder." Hickman was the first witness called by the government in the penalty phase of McVeigh's trial. The government moved to have evidence of McVeigh's execution of Terry Nichols presented in the penalty phase of his trial. When the evidence was presented to the jury it included graphic pictures of the dead bodies of the Branch Davidians killed in a 1993 fire, videotape of the execution and testimony from Temple worker Steven Schneider. Hickman told the jury in Oklahoma City that it was possible the baby died before the attack on the Alfred P. Murrah building. He said the pathologist who examined the baby on March 18, 1995, concluded the infant died prior to the attack on the Murrah building. McVeigh, 51, was convicted in June 1997 of orchestrating the April 19, 1995, bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City. Nichols, d0c515b9f4

The votes aren't the be-all, end-all, the best answer is one that could be considered the most correct, complete, appropriate answer and the best explanation of why it is correct. For instance, if you post a comment on a post asking for clarification, that's helpful. In this case, many of the answers are, of course, highly educational. However, for example, being able to download an entire The Witcher game (8 gigabytes) from a torrent with no glitches whatsoever is helpful, but isn't really educational - the fact that no one has posted that answer doesn't mean that it's not useful, it's just that people may not find it useful. Likewise, even though the question doesn't ask for a software solution, if someone writes up a detailed post on one of the tools they use to solve the problem and how they do it, that's helpful to people. To be clear, we're not discouraging people from providing educational answers that don't have votes, but we are asking them not to be counted as votes, unless they can be considered as such. And we ask that they not only vote for the best educational answer, but also explain what makes it the best. A: I'm a little confused why you're even asking this here. This is clearly not a homework assignment, and we're not a class or a lab or anything like that. We're all here to learn - don't you think? A: The best answer will be the answer that provides the most education, and answers the question with the greatest amount of information and detailed explanations. The fact that the answer does not have votes does not mean that it is not an equally good answer for the question. I'm a recent grad with a degree in Finance from Michigan State University, and I'm very interested in joining the financial services industry. I'm currently working as a bank teller, but I'm open to new opportunities (preferably a little more exciting than that). While I've worked in banks, I know there are many other options, and I'm interested in learning more about

A: Check out this post on SuperUser.com about a year ago: For example, you can get it for Win7 by purchasing Win7 Signature Edition from their web site. I also suggest that you try Winamp streaming applications like WinAmpLive or WinAmpLive 2. Q: Should this question be closed? I'm asking about the written form I'm a 26-year-old female. I use the passive tense: "Men come from Egypt... the Philippines... etc." "Men from Egypt have..." and "Men from the Philippines have..." Shouldn't this question be closed because it's a duplicate? I only just realised that this question has been asked before A: I'd vote to reopen, since there's nothing wrong with this type of statement. The question you linked to is for people who say "men from Egypt have..." "men from the Philippines have..." "men from the US have...", etc. A: I'm a 26-year-old male. I use the passive tense: "Men come from Egypt... the Philippines... etc." "Men from Egypt have..." and "Men from the Philippines have..." Shouldn't this question be closed because it's a duplicate? I only just realised that this question has been asked before The question you link to is rather particular, asking about specific statements. Thus, this question should be closed as a duplicate. There's a specific rule which would close this question under the "duplicate" close reason. (The question you link to is not actually a duplicate, though, since the question is asking about the written form whereas your question is asking about the meaning of the statement. I would, however, vote to reopen this question if you were to choose to put a reopen vote.
