You can use this release of trainz to play the Phase IV of the Amtrak P42DC locomotive. Additional Information: Big Ben, it's time to retire. Great diesel engines! P42DC locomotives are one of the heaviest and most powerful locomotives in the world. The engines weigh at least 100 tons. These locomotives are usually featured in the North Atlantic and Northeast Corridor trains. On the Northeast Corridor, P42DC locomotives are placed in Acela Express trains, Xcelsior trains and Northeast Direct trains, and some Viewliner Sleepers. They are also being used on the Southwest Chief in the United States. Some P42DC locomotives are refurbished with National Train Facility (NTF) technology and modified to support CTC. The engine's car body is built by the GE Transportation's special rail car body shop in North America. NTF-fitted P42DCs feature improved heat transfer and engine control systems, which result in lower emissions. NEW: have the fans and electronic wipers work NEW: the script was updated with new cab signals, style script and change the brake music IMPROVED: changed marker lights, the drivers were improved when moving the marker cars Rail Cars: Amfleet cars get a New Body Construction by Grace Building Company from 1995-2004. The cars are numbered in Series 2177 to 2227. The cars are mainly used on the Northeast Corridor and Northeast Direct. The cars are also used on the Twilight Shoreliner in daytime. The cars are currently painted in blue with a red stripe and white stripe. The cars are numbered in a pattern similar to the Peregrine locomotives. The cars got a revised Amfleet logo in 2001. The cars originally had been painted in a gray scheme but were eventually repainted in a reddish-blue scheme with a cream-colored stripe. The 1997 contract allowed Amtrak to use any manufacturer, so no Amtrak paint scheme was involved. The Peregrine cars are numbered in series 2118 to 2128. Sunset Viewliners are equipped with a cab car with a red stripe and white stripe. The cars are numbered in series from 2139 to 2189. The cars are used on the Twilight Shoreliner. Viewliners are blue with a red stripe and white stripe. They are used on the Glacier Viewliner in daytime. They are numbered in series 2274 to 2277. They are currently painted in a black scheme with a gold stripe. All View
