Cambridge English Course Student Book Level 2 Â· Level 2 ETS Book EnglishÂ .An internet hacker's victory in a court of law against Gawker has inspired a new movement dubbed "Hacking Grandmas." They're hacking in to websites they figure are illegal or at least uninteresting. And what they find is hilarious. Several parents have been afraid that their kids were going to search the internet for the lyrics to "Stairway to Heaven," so they've hacked the word into Google and redirected the search to iTunes, which has blocked access to the lyrics. One mom hacked into a "Babynames.com" database and changed the name of a baby girl to "Rihanna Bitch." A dad hacked into one of the major Internet porn providers and replaced every image of a teeny-tiny, pink-haired teenage girl with a photo of a young Matthew McConaughey. He replaced the photo of the 12-year-old girl who accused Penn State of rape with a photo of the 12-year-old boy who accused Penn State of rape. Another dad changed his kid's name to "Heather Love," "Helen Keller," and "Rihanna's Ass." Many of the hacked sites have been disabled. One site owner had her site taken down by the government when it realized she was offering the lyrics to "Stairway." Gawker is still offering the super-high-priced site from which some people hacked the Stairway of Glory lyrics.Q: Cannot get a connection to the Member Server? e79caf774b
