The wonders of the ancient kingdom of Old Japan lie at the center of D'Lirium, the kingdom's capital. Five great faiths, each with a different way of looking at the world, inhabit the city. For eighteen years, the great and noble Prince Red Waka has ruled as the unchallenged monarch. He will do anything to protect his people, his empire, and his faith, the God Box. You can begin the main story as the God Box Hero, a brave apprentice who is destined to unify the five faiths into one glorious nation. You will join Red Waka in his final quest, to restore the God Box to its rightful place.

Gameplay Features of D'Lirium: Character Customization. The God Box Hero allows you to build your character by opening five Ability Shops and five Weapon Shops. There are eight varieties of Abilities (Attack, Defense, Evade, Speed, and so on) and twelve varieties of Weapons, which can be equipped three times. You can change your Abilities and Weapons at any time. You can even use Items (good stuff looted from enemies, souls, and so on) to outfit your character with various customizations. Art Style. Using an easy-to-use customization feature (Swap Weave), you can select a face and body for your character, change his or her hair, and stylize the face and body with various designs.

Story. Story D'Lirium is a game that allows you to experience the adventure of a hero with lots of different ways to complete your mission. With the God Box Hero, you will embark on an exciting adventure where you can explore the world from a first-person perspective and gather information to build a map of the kingdom. After experiencing the adventure as a God Box Hero, if you become dissatisfied with the hero selection, you can change your hero while wandering the world to encounter various missions as a Hero with Ability Shops. We've also prepared "Intelligence" and "Luck" systems, which allow you to follow your own path in playing the game. The Magic that Underlies D'Lirium: The game is a dynamic story adventure game that helps you master the art of an RPG. D'Lirium features a system that changes the difficulty of the game according to your character's ability (intelligence) and luck. It's a universal entertainment system that allows everyone to enjoy a magical adventure.

The Great War is approaching! Finnish armoured corps have scored a great victory against the invading Germans in Poland, and Russian forces are advancing on Berlin... In this game you will have the opportunity to play as an officer of the Finnish armoured corps, or a German officer in Nazi uniform. Campaigns and scenarios are being prepared to give a great replay value to the game. A variety of different situations can be played, including the one where the Soilers are trying to destroy the homeland of the Finns. You will be able to travel from the most modern set in Eastern Europe, to the densest forests and swamps in Finland. It's going to be a long journey, but it will be worth it. Q: How to remove the glitch when using scrollLeft() I have a div that slides out when the screen size is greater than or equal to the div's height. This works fine until you use scrollLeft() on the div. While attempting to scroll the div, a glitch occurs, causing the div to jump to the correct position. I've tried setting the overflow to auto, but it won't make a difference. Here's my code: var portfolio = $("#portfolio"); var draw = setInterval(function () { if(window.innerWidth ($("#portfolio").height())) { c9d1549cdd

What's new:

A while ago I came across a very impressive pet project of one of my favorite composers, Thomas Hempel. You might remember his great work in the Mario platformers. His score to The Castaway in my opinion is one of the best achievements in music game soundtracks, especially at that time. Now he has come with a new project that I wish to share with you. That's the first soundtrack from his private life which he made for the Pantheon project. The idea is very simple: Racing on a track of the background of the Pantheon Rome, the player cars drive around on a few different parts of this famous building and have to win the race against another car each time. The music tracks are only static and the player does not have to steer the car. Every time he reaches the right track, the background sound of the the building changes. This requires the composer to make over 200 varied sounds. For this, Thomas has collected several rooms of his beloved Rome, and a whole lot of engine sounds of the motorsbike that he made himself. Best of all, to make all of that possible, he had to know the anatomy of his own ears and how these noises resonate with his mind. Beside the six short tracks, that are all over 3 minutes long, Thomas has added five chiptune versions of his tracks, just for fun. The music is definitely worth of a listen. I can, of course, not say much more than that one, but do take a look at the music video. I think you will like it. Next I want to share the artwork with you guys, although I really like this much more than the music. The game's name is "Pantheon", so the artwork is very fitting. However I would have preferred to see a bit more detail and quite possibly a little story behind the game. And actually, i wish that Thomas had added a little more tracks to his soundtrack too. I would have liked to have seen "Car Chaos", "Car Explosions", and "Green City", which are missing in this mix. They could have fit in quite well, i think. Again, please do click on the link to the song. The music was created by Thomas Hempel and released on his Soundcloud page. We can't be sure, but the prism of history suggests that in the first year of a significant period of change, two young men - two similars for so many reasons of gender, background, and the like - both will cause extraordinary stirrings in their countries, both will put themselves on the front edge of those changes, and both will be damned for it. Even if we could know with certainty exactly what they would have achieved by the age of thirty, might we not say we just don't know that, either, and instead defer, even a little, to that young man who walked toward danger, glory, and the world on his own, and who - by irrepressible grace and will - created the great shuddering nation where he now stands in the dawn and looks across its acres to that other young man, his dark counterpart, and says, somewhere across an ocean, "So, shall it be." Efficient ligation of the surface of hepatitis B virus (HBV) core particles by hybrid B/E derived from hepatitis B surface (HBs) antigen. Protein ligation of the surface of the particulate forms of hepatitis B virus (HBV) has been approached by hybrid protein B/E derived from surface antigen and having the particle-binding site of hepatitis B surface (HBs) antigen. Although efficient B/E hybrid protein could be constructed, it was somewhat unstable. Two types of B/E were studied in detail, one of which (B/E2) was stabilized by the introduction of surface antigen-related sequences at the C-terminal end of the B domain. It was found that the proportion of surface antigen-derived sequences, determining the in vivo stability of B/E hybrid, coincided with the level of surface antigen-related sequences at the C-terminal end of B/E itself. B/E2 bound the surface antigen during viral structural assembly in vivo as efficiently as did the parent
