I'm trying to set up ssh key-based authentication on my server running Ubuntu 10.04. I have generated an RSA key, and started the ssh-keygen process. I'm stuck now - I don't know where to look for information on certificate checks, or what information to look for when checking to ensure the key is usable for establishing an ssh session. A: There are two steps to it - the first is what your server will do with a new ssh public key, then after that has accepted the ssh key it will do the second step which is tell the client that it has valid ssh public key. If you are generating a RSA key with ssh-keygen the first step is to test the public key in question - you do this with ssh-keygen -l -e'ssh-rsa AAAAB...some-key' where -e is for 'encrypted public key' and -l is for 'printing the public key' (so no need to do this with sshd_config) - you should get something like this: Public key bits: 4096 ssh-rsa AAAAB3NzaC1yc2EAAAADAQAB...some-key To test the public key, the server needs to start sshd and add the public key to it's configuration, so it knows this is the public key your server will accept. It should tell you if the key is bad, like this: $ ssh-keygen -l -e'ssh-rsa AAAAB3NzaC1yc2EAAAADAQAB...some-key' /usr/

I've been pondering about this problem for quite some time now, and I couldn't find a satisfactory answer. Let's say I have 3 csv files, each file containing a unique id that is used to create a HashMap containing the data for a respective csv file. Here's the structure of my data: id,name,age,address,city 1222,jim,22,street,city1 1144,mike,44,street2,city2 ... Each file has a different number of columns, so one file might have an id, name, age, city, and zip, while the other only an id and name. There may be 100's of files, and they all contain unique ids. What's the best method to build a hashmap from all of these files? I've looked at libraries like FastCSV ( and GemCSV ( but they seem very limited as they either don't support different formats like mine, or they have a hard time dealing with lines of thousands or more. Since this is a project for a non-profit organization that's needed to work with data from several sources, it needs to be as fast as possible. For example, the CSV files could range from 2-30MB in size each, and the total file size could easily exceed 100MB. A: The only way to have a quick response is to store the data in a SQLite database. On the other hand, several studies have shown that the general underlying pathological processes in patients with HNC and HF are quite distinct. For instance, research has revealed that the hypoxia and ischemia pathway are predominant in HF while angiogenesis is the main driver of HNC ([@B11]; [@B6]; [@B22]; [@B29]; [@B19]; [@B24]). However, in our study, we found that the hypoxia and ischemia pathway and angiogenesis signaling pathways were both activated in HF and HNC, demonstrating a common activation pathway for both diseases.
