Q: Different bashrc line between Ubuntu and Linux Mint I am using Ubuntu and have my shell configuration stored in ~/.bashrc. However, this doesn't seem to be the case for Linux Mint. There is no ~/.bashrc file (and using ~/.bash_profile also doesn't seem to work). How can I get the same bashrc file for both? A: I just added the ~/.bashrc file to the.bash_profile file of Linux Mint 17.

Q: How to create lines of color using svg? I have created a shape using d3.js. The line is created by giving class and x1, y1, x2, y2. I have found that lines can be created using colors. I need to change the color of the line using d3.js based on a condition. Is there a method to create a line of color using d3.js? A: Sure, you can create a path with more than one stroke: `var path = svg.append("path").attr("d", path`

Create your own Arena and Battle for the top positions. Choose from 10 different ships with their own arsenal, features and stats, and make sure your skills are up to the highest level before jumping into battle! In the space age, it takes more than just guts and luck to be a champ. Utopos is a classic MOSA - Multiplayer Online Space Arena (more commonly referred to as MOO) where you can fight for the top positions on your own or in the company of your buddies! Climb the ladder to become the ultimate rocketship fighter and break your personal record. But beware: your opponents aren't exactly sitting still... Let the gameplay speak for itself. Enemies - Enter the Arena Play against AI bots or your friends to train on your own. Challenge and defeat a total of 40 different bots, each a unique challenge to overcome. After every fight you can continue training from a base in the map.

Preparations In Utopos you have to start preparing your ship before the battle. Select your type of ship from 10 different options and equip it with your favorite weapons. Some ships have more speed or firepower than others, so make sure to play around until you find the best fit. Once your ship is prepared, equip it with ammunition and weapons. During the battle you have to adapt to your opponent's weapon load and firepower. Remember that your weapons will go down if you spend too much ammunition, so keep an eye on your ammo counter. A MOO like Utopos doesn't have any loadouts to choose from, unlike other MOOs. Therefore, there is no random loot or spectator mode to complain about. The only feedback you get is the result of your own battle and the resulting score. That's all there is to it! Game Modes All the fight are for one reason: the 500 million Strat Cup! With each round you see how far you can go up the ladder in fights. The higher you reach, the better medals you get. * Stock Cup: Stand alone matches against the AI (about 10 bots per game). * Sponsor Cup: Fight for 10 different sponsors in a full rank. Rank 1 is for rank 30 and so on. * Weekly Cup: Fight for 10 special characters in a rank or leaderboard format. * Battle Cup: Fight in a ranked battle for the first place. * Weekend Cup: Fight in a ranked battle over the course of 48 c9d1549cdd

* Blazing Gameplay: Dodge bullets & reach the end of the screen to get all your points! * Spectacular Soundtrack: Blast into space in a one-of-a-kind, orchestral soundtrack! * Classic Arcade Gameplay: Supercharge your weapons and abilities using your character's power meters! * Shoot 'em Up Action: Use the Super Shot to blast enemies & earn points! * Challenging Gameplay: Play on different difficulties to suit your style! * Customize Your Hero: Customize your character using multiple weapons and abilities, and unlock other characters as you play! * Three Story Campaign: Blast your way through five different mission to uncover the mystery of the little forgotten satellite, PROJECT BUZZ. * PvP Combat: Challenge your friends to see who's the ultimate Rampage Rex! * Online Leaderboards: Game against the best players in the world on your iPhone or iPad! * Matching Game Center Progress: Check how your progress stacks up against friends on Game Center. * Retina Display Support: Can't stop looking at the gorgeous graphics? Play the game on your iPhone or iPad's Retina display! 0 Games for Little Kids Play and Grow in More Ways Than One Jump on your App Store bike and check out our list of the top games for kids. We have tons of interactive games for the wee ones, which will help them explore their creative side and strengthen their early learning skills. Our collection of games for kids is constantly expanding, so be sure to check back often to see what's new. Play games like Animal Watch, Bath Time, Balloons, Bubble Breaker, What's the Baby Wearing?, What's Cooking?, Horse Play, Nursery Rhymes, Kissing, And many more! Doodle Jump 2 was a nice surprise! I never expected to really like an endless runner, and I think it's a great game. It doesn't take too long to get the hang of it, and the game keeps its pace consistent, even when you're a little off the beaten path. I'm not a big fan of these games that are really about the momentum more than anything else. In Doodle Jump 2, you control a blue, yellow or red ball. You're free to jump as high as you want, and the game is presented as if you were a bird-like creature in the clouds, where you can learn to glide, and use your momentum to glide even further. The of the Future Project Description Ocean technology explorations requires the ability to access depths with air pressure as deep as 12,000 feet below sea level. The vehicle known as the DeepSea Challenger, developed by OceanGate Technologies, and owned by Mr. Dave McKillop, allows access to depths up to 500 feet. At depths of 500 to 660 feet, and pressure is pure nitrogen. At this depth, the vehicle operates at a rate of about 12 to 15 pounds of pressure per square inch. This pressure is needed for the crew to survive. The DeepSea Challenger was designed specifically for the top-dwelling expeditionary role, but the air-independent power (AIP) capabilities ensure the vehicle is capable of operating at even greater depths. Built from the GAN EST.32 hull by Gas-Aero-Naval (GAN EST.32) Engineering of Scottsdale, the DeepSea Challenger is equipped with the latest propulsion technology. Aluminum hull, high-performance lithium-ion batteries, and hardware supplied by LANDIS, GAN EST.32 and Krauss-Maffei, are integrated into a system that ensures ships have more air than water. Thus a single tank would be required for air supply to the crew. The head room is approximately three feet, is equipped with oxygen cylinders and pressure suits, and has a ballistic window for the crew. The front is equipped with a variable buoyancy manifold, weighing 50 pounds, that maintains constant buoyancy regardless of the depth or swell load. Design is built to ensure a safe return home. This means a survival kit, including a fresh water supply. There is also one 100 cubic-foot tank for volume of air that provides a 600-hour endurance. The pressure hull contains a kerosene combustion engine and nitrogen gas tanks. This air can be burned for fuel or purified to provide clean, unconverted air. The prototype is currently undergoing sea trials. The dive team on board which include two pilots, a deckhand, an engineer, two pilots, an estimator, two deckhands, two fish divers, and a manager are built from the Navy's Deep Sea Search and Rescue Program Team (DSSAR), the process crews of the 1960s. If a deep seafloor is where the DeepSea Challenger is designed, safe submarine operations are a one-way mission. A safe return home of the crews is safe access for maintaining operations and exploration. The vehicle has
