I can connect to the web through 192.168.1.3 with no problem. How can I use my pi as a desktop (like connecting to my lappie on my home wifi network) rather than getting stuck using the UI to my pi? A: What you're looking for is a "static route" within your home network. With a static route, there's no need to go through the default gateway provided by your ISP. In your home router, you would enter a "route 192.168.x.x 0.0.0.0" (where x is your home network's subnet). Then in your Pi, you would enter that same route statement through the "ip route" command. Furthermore, you will need to be sure that all computers within your network can see each other without seeing your Pi first. This is often called a "router independent internet access" (RIA). In your home network, this would be accomplished by using your company router as your default gateway, and port forwarding the rapsberry PI's port to the pi's WAN IP address.
