Q: Getting a URL of a node (in a range) I have used the code below to grab a URL of a node in a range, the problem is that I don't want all the URLs in that node but just the first one in a range. I tried using getnodebytitle but this only seems to return first URL in range. Sub GrabUrl() With ActiveDocument.Range .Collapse Direction:=wdCollapseEnd .Move(wdSelection, 2) .Select End With With ActiveDocument.Range.End(xlDown) With.Find .ClearFormatting .Text = "" .Replacement.Text =.Text .Replacement.Wrap = wdFindStop .Execute End With Set r = ActiveDocument.Range If r.Rows.Count > 1 Then Set r = r.End(xlUp) End If r.Select If r.Rows.Count = 0 Then 'No URLs in the range Exit Sub End If End With Set r = ActiveDocument.Range With r .Collapse Direction:=wdCollapseEnd .Move(wdSelection, 2) .Select End With Do While IsEmpty(ActiveDocument.Range) With ActiveDocument.Range .Collapse Direction:=wdCollapseEnd .Move(wdSelection, 2) .Select End With Loop End Sub A: The reason why you always get the first URL of the document is that you are always looping with.Move(wdSelection, 2) before setting the range to the actual URL. Remove that and it should work. Also, you can remove that loop with

Eupithecia lygaea Eupithecia lygaea is a moth in the family Geometridae first described by Rolphe Knous in 1911. It is found in the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Poland, Hungary, Austria, the Czech Republic, Germany, Russia and Ukraine. The wingspan is 17–19 mm. The larvae feed on various grasses. References Category:Moths described in 1911 lygaea Category:Moths of EuropeComparative accuracy of pressure and volume measurements using portable devices, flat-dial and cylindrical tubes. To assess differences in various continuous noninvasive blood pressure (BP) and stroke volume (SV) monitors. Twenty-two studies were conducted from September 1997 to March 2002, including a total of 319 subjects. The monitors included: handheld monitors (Portapres, Dinamap), home monitors (Dinamap), upper-arm monitors (Digi-monitor, Dinamap noninvasive oscillometric system (NOS), Critikon, Welch Allyn), adult flat-diaphragm monitor (PAM-III), and Doppler monitor (Transonic). Arterial and ear canal arterial BPs and SV were compared to monitor values. Static pressures and volumes were compared between instruments in order to assess static inflation properties. Temporal trends were also assessed using Bland-Altman and Spearman correlations. There were no significant differences in the averages of monitor-derived pressures and volumes compared to arterial pressure and SV. Bland-Altman analysis found no evidence of systematic or proportional errors in either systolic or diastolic pressures or SV. Static pressures and volumes were found to be comparable in all monitors. For example, averages of both systolic and diastolic pressure (mmHg) were within 5 mmHg for all monitors in 31 of the tests (101 of 319 (31%)) and within 10 mmHg in 21 of the tests (67 of 319 (20%)). We found that the average differences between monitors (measured - mean) were not greater than the SBPSD in 33 of the tests (102 of 319 (32%)) or DBPSD in 10 of the tests (32 of 319 (10%)) indicating that none of the monitors showed evidence of a systematic bias. Despite the large array of continuous BP monitoring modalities, various monitors demonstrate similar accuracy for systolic BP and SV
