74 Corey Beck has struggled with shingles and post-traumatic stress disorder after a terrifying encounter with a grizzly bear in South Sudan.
He was in the Ugandan army at the time. His challenges are really his own. An American film-maker and colleague tells the story of Corey, working with his 12-year-old son, as they track the origins of a deadly plague that could rapidly ravage North Africa. Aging peacekeepers from Colombia and El Salvador are under fire in South Sudan, where they have been ordered to take part in nighttime operations against armed groups in the capital, Juba.
But these same peacekeepers are being accused of human rights abuses against civilians. Stephen Miles reports on the tense situation in South Sudan. South Sudan has faced a humanitarian disaster since a long-running conflict between its President and rebel forces erupted two years ago. Over 200,000 people have died and millions of people have fled from their homes into neighboring countries. So what is the status of the country now that peace talks have ended?
