Although aspirin has been known to cause bronchospasm, the incidence of aspirin-induced bronchospasm (AIBS) is still unclear and controversial. The aim of this study was to assess the clinical importance of the association of aspirin and bronchospasm by comparing the incidence of bronchospasm in patients with AIBS and other patients. A survey was conducted at the Fukuoka University Hospital over an 8-year period. During the survey period, 33 patients with aspirin-induced immediate bronchospasm were identified. Of the 33 patients, 3 had bronchial asthma. The remaining 30 patients fulfilled the diagnostic criteria of AIBS. The mean age of the study group was 45 years old and 20 were female patients. In all the 33 patients, aspirin was used in therapeutic doses (1-3 g/day). In the group with bronchospasm, the mean age of the patients was 49.5 years and 13 were female. In the group without bronchospasm, the mean age of the patients was 45.7 years and 14 were female. The incidence of bronchospasm in all patients was 24%. The incidence in patients with bronchospasm was higher in the aspirin group than in the non-aspirin group, although the differences were not significant. There was no significant association between the history of bronchial asthma and the presence of bronchospasm. However, there was a strong association between bronchospasm and abnormal reaction of the skin after aspirin challenge in asthmatic patients. At least a quarter of patients taking aspirin for analgesia or headache may develop bronchospasm. Although there was no significant difference, the incidence of bronchospasm in patients taking aspirin for analgesia or headache was significantly higher in asthmatic patients than in non-asthmatic patients.04? 108 Calculate the remainder when 133947088 is divided by 86. 82 Calculate the remainder when 3223072 is divided by 159. 61 What is the remainder when 3152632 is divided by 5561? 5630 What is the remainder when 15486118 is divided by 19400
