The Fractalist is a maverick and a pioneer in the fields of chaos theory and complex dynamics. He is one of the most proficient and entertaining scientists in the world. John F. Claerbout was a professor at Stanford University for fifty years and the author of the leading textbook in the field of mathematical physics and complex dynamics. So fractals—what are they? What do they mean to you, to scientists, to mathematicians, and to engineers? These are questions that Fractal Cities' The Fractalist answers with wit, honesty, intelligence, and passion. October 3, 2010 Summer Uniforms My summer uniform is black, white, and hot pink. I wear all three colors of the rainbow to school. Technically, I know this makes me a heat stroke case. But I love being comfortable and most of the day I feel better when I don't sweat so much. Most of the time, hot pink is the worst part of the uniform. It is either too bright or too tacky. But I've found that the white of my uniform offsets the pink of the socks and sometimes the pants. I usually wear the white for the first two days of each week and then switch to the hot pink the rest of the week. This helps to balance out the colors and when I wear the extra pink the kids like it much more. I bought my first pair of true hot pink pants this summer. I love the color and they fit. The only time I am really seen wearing a pink uniform is when I wear a leotard. Usually the uniform will be 2 or 3 sizes too big but a leotard can look and feel perfect for pretty much any situation. I've worn the same leotard every day for eight years. It has seen its last day before summer is over.
