At the end of each month, I'll list the items I'm thankful for. Here are the first five: 1. My husband. Without him, none of this would be possible. While he's been too sick to do any cooking, he's done everything else, including cleaning our home, visiting other people, making sure the kids keep quiet, going on errands, and going to the doctor. Without him, our lives would be a mess. 2. The people and pets in my family. This list contains them all and feels so very long! I'm lucky. I'm blessed. They're all important. 3. Healthy children. I'm thankful for them every day.

4. Food. I'm blessed with plenty of it. I have a great home-cooking ability, and the majority of my meals are good healthy ones. I do a lot of entertaining, and take great care to plan menus that are both enjoyable and healthy. I'm also very fortunate to live near a choice of grocery stores, including an organic one. 5. My kids, in spite of all their tears and tantrums. They're strong, and they're beautiful. The list goes on and on. Thanksgiving is probably the hardest day to be thankful, because we only focus on the things that are wrong in our lives. But it's better to focus on what we have than what we don't have. I'm proud to have these things in my life. They have made me a person of purpose, and I'm grateful for my life. Even though I've only been cooking consistently for a little over a year, I'm beginning to think I'm actually in love with it. As the co-host of The Food Wishes Show, I get to travel all over the world and talk to top chefs, wineries, and cooks all over the U.S.
