Tekla Structural Designer now comes with a predefined connection resistance database, which includes a range of connection types for Eurocode and AISC. This saves you from having to set up your own. The capacity of connections can now be checked as part of the design and helps you to identify potential issues of forming connections early in the design process. Tekla EPM (Estimating and Production Management) is a tool that has been built for and with the steel fabricators. As its name summarizes, it helps standardize your estimating process, empowers project managers with real time visibility to the project progress and brings purchasing and production control into a new level of speed and automation. Tekla EPM includes every functionality a steel fabricator could need: Estimating, Project Management with scheduling, Production Control, Material Optimization, Inventory Control, Purchasing and Order Entry. (Tekla EPM was formerly known as FabSuite) Description: Tekla Structures is a building information modeling software (BIM) that allows you to create accurate, detailed, design-friendly 3D models from any material and any complexity and manage them. Even more, the ShapeBuilder technology now connects directly to Tekla Structures. This means that you can use geometric representations to model features such as holes, bolts, and other fasteners. For example, you can easily create tube sections that are backed by the bolt design technology. The shape extraction technology within Tekla Structures is out of this world. ShapeBuilder is a completely new technology for Tekla that allows you to model geometry that is linked to the Tekla Structures model. For example, you can use ShapeBuilder to model the face of the deck you just designed in Tekla Structures. The shape is extracted and inserted into the corresponding faces in the finished project.
