SDK version and is compatible with all standard components from Tobii. The SDK is provided with an evaluation license that can be used until June 30th, 2017. Now you can send clicks and movements to your virtual avatar using your gaze. Simply line up your eyes with the goggles, make a head movement, or track your gaze and move your head back and forth. You can detect these simple movements using the embedded infrared camera, with simple computer vision algorithms to use for recognizing the face and the head position as you walk. This makes it possible to do all kinds of things, like play computer games, turn on the lights, or control the computer. You can move in any direction by moving your head, and any movement is detected and sent to the avatar. You can also make a very precise head movement, e.g. by tilting your head. It even works in the dark! As your head moves, a dot (or a circle for the Tobii device without gaze tracking) will appear on the screen. Move your head towards that dot, and you will move the avatar away from you. Move your head away, and the avatar will come towards you.
