the lifedrums collection is a shame. the collection is a fine looking set of acoustic drums and percussion, but the actual drums are all sampled from existing instruments, and offer no practical performance options. there are no complex features here and, as such, the collection is a great addition to any studio, or even if you just want to experiment with drum samples in a live set. we have a lot of love for the pianoteq series from native instruments, and with good reason. its one of the most sophisticated virtual instrument series available and, at a hefty price tag too, its a great value for money investment, offering a lot of real quality for your money. pianoteq is certainly not for the faint of heart, however. with complex configurability, and a learning curve to rival any but the most experienced pianists, pianoteq is best described as a complex, and if you like tweaking settings and tweaking settings, then pianoteq is the instrument for you. in order to fully appreciate the sheer amount of control available and to begin to develop your own unique musical style, you will need to master the instrument, but thats certainly a lot easier with a real piano, or something like this one. in this edition, youll find a neighborhood piano that is more than a virtual instrument, it is a live stage performance. theres eight standard keys, a full 88 note keyboard, and a keybed that can be split for even more notes. key to note, the precision and control of these samples is second to none, with the ability to create countless different piano sounds and configurations. aside from the standard sequencing mode, pianoteq also offers a creative performance mode that lets you use the keyboard to perform a spontaneous performance, using the notes and chords you choose, with the ability to go back and change, alter and develop your notes as you go along. for musictech, pianoteq is a lot more than a keyboard, its a musical instrument that you can play like a real piano, and its one that is capable of taking your creativity and imagination to a whole new level. if youre a pianist looking for a virtual instrument that can create a truly authentic performance of a real piano, then pianoteq is the instrument for you. 5ec8ef588b
