Today's sound companies are not just presenting technology, but art forms in their own right. And though they have been in existence for well over a decade, their sophistication and utility is just beginning. I for one am keenly interested in what the future holds in sonic innovation.

Jbl Audio Engineering For Sound Reinforcement Pdf 57

I will be using a D1 Digital Amp (Pre/Crossover/EQ) (Booth #M74) to amplify the sound from the speakers into the mixer. My next task is to search the net for the best boards to use. I would like to make my own speaker board as well. Anything specific I should know about doing this? I have two separate speakers for vocals and music. They should be the high end of the range, but they are separated. My engineer suggested that I buy two powered preamps, one for vocals and one for music and mix the two in the mixer. He also suggested that I connect the mic inputs to the monitors and the line inputs to the integrated amplifiers. I got the speakers in January, and now they are the only audio you can listen to. He told me to call him immediately if I run into any problems. I don't like this idea of having to mix two separate signals. It might sound great, but I want to hear it all mixed up. I'm thinking of using the P.A. connections and the line outputs in the mixer. It sounds good when you plug in a single speaker, but when you upgrade to a stereo or quad setup, the sound gets distorted. Some people say you can add a second channel of distortion and other people say it sounds really distorted. Any help would be nice! Good day from Germany. I'm building a three band system consisting of a pair of active and one passive driver/satellite speakers. I'm looking at the Zu Audio UA-185.5L Full-Range 8-Way Active / Full-Range 8-Way Active Speaker System. I would like to match the sound exactly to my 18" HK Pro-Project 1.0 Hi-Fi Audio Center Monitor Speakers. If anyone has suggestions on this or can direct me to a place that sells these speakers, I'd appreciate it. Thank you! 5ec8ef588b
