The top of the building, which is divided into four levels, is topped by a large lit sign with Plex's logo. The building is connected to the, which is also the site of major freeways including I-110. On the first level, which features a large glass entrance, is the, which is owned and operated by advertising agency J. Walter Thompson (JWT). The agency's Lexus car commercials have been filmed in the terminal. The building itself is a glass tower with an area of to accommodate a windbreak effect. The tower's base is to the street level, and the top of the tower is above the street level, for a total height of. The second level features a glass arcade that is similar to London's Gherkin. The area is mainly used by the agency's employees and for other business purposes. The third level is a large open space that is used for presentations and other purposes by JWT. The fourth level is a courtyard similar to Shanghai's Jinmao Tower that is used as a vehicle garage. Since the opening of the Plaza in early 2011, its success has been trumpeted in the New York Times, Bloomberg Businessweek, CNN, and the Los Angeles Times. The Plaza Building was designed by, co-founder of Gensler. The cost of building the Plaza was projected to be $120 million. The fourth level is 4,000 square feet in size. The building has 530 parking spaces for vehicles, including 128 parking spaces for Lexus vehicles. There is a landscaped forecourt in front of the Plaza Building, which is accessible to the public, as the parking space is located in the same deck as the building's entrance. There is a curved drive in front of the building, which connects to the. There are no major sidewalks along the of the eastern side of Times Square. Corridor of the building North-south On the north side of Times Square between West 42nd and West 44th Streets, there are nine "corner parks" in the area that was once used for the Central Park in New York City, which it has since been replaced with the Seagram Building. A park named "Times Square Park" is located south of the Plaza. The park is similar to the former Central Park except that it is larger. East-west The east-west stretch contains Times Square's main pedestrian street
